Muhammad Al Jibaly Books Pdf 32 - You, Muslims in Bahrain - The Politics of "Activism". For the, and Books by Muhammad al-Jibaly Muhammad al-Jibaly Muhammad al-Jibaly (Arabic: المجهلي أمّان (Al-Muhatja' l-Jibwiyah, 1891-1975) was a Moroccan poet, novelist and intellectual. He was born in Tangier and died in Agadir. He wrote over 20 books and in addition, published numerous short stories and essays in his lifetime. He won the prestigious Amal Prize in 1961, and was awarded the Decoration of the Order of the Palms of the State of Emirate of Morocco in 1972. Although he was a devout Muslim, al-Jibaly made a distinction between his faith and politics. He stressed that since there was no supreme authority, as in the Catholic Church or the Reformed Church, there could only be guidance from the Koran. He however encouraged Muslims to be active in politics. The historian John W. Breton points out that al-Jibaly is one of the few African writers to have "clearly recognized" his heritage and insisted that his books are written according to the tenets of classical Arab poetics. His writings tend to be autobiographical as he shares in his work the trials and tribulations of a Moroccan Muslim in the context of French colonialism. Out of chaos Al-Jibaly began writing in the early 1920s in response to the growing "dilemma" of the contemporary situation in Morocco. He rejected the writing style which at the time was dominated by politics. In his political writing al-Jibaly attacked colonialism and stressed the value of cooperation with France in order to improve the condition of the indigenous Moroccan people. In his works as a poet and novelist he found a more fruitful way to convey his message to the people. In "Out of Chaos" for example, he describes his experiences on horseback in the Moroccan Sahara from the age of 13 to 25. Among his other works are "The Train," "Godfather of the Perfume," "The Battle of the Casabar," "Happiness of the Black," "The Unexplored Beloved," "The Amal Kings," "The Misfortune of the
