While home improvement and repair projects are typically planned and executed by a homeowner, these projects are typically kept simple due to both labor costs and standard building practices. If you are looking for a more tailored approach to address your home maintenance and improvement needs, there are a number of services that you can use to improve your home and reduce home maintenance costs while saving you time. Home warranties, home service agreements and other similar service agreements are an excellent starting point for helping your family manage and lower home maintenance costs. The home service contract provides two main benefits: Provides Homeowners some level of cover under an insurance policy by protecting against potential damages or other problems within their home Reduces the total cost of fixing or maintaining your home Home Services Agreements Home warranties are a third-party service provided by a reputable insurer to assist the homeowner in protecting their home or home improvements against potential damage. With a home warranty, the insurer identifies and covers possible issues within the home that are associated with damage or wear and tear. This cover is typically available for a minimum of a year and may last for as long as the home is insured. How a Home Service Agreement Works A home service agreement acts as an extension of a homeowner's insurance policy. The home warranty agreement typically covers basic repairs and maintenance, including items such as appliances, plumbing, mechanical systems and the like. According to a Home Warranty Alliance report, a typical one-year home warranty service agreement covers up to 90 days of labor to perform an average of 400 activities, which can include simple things like cleaning and dusting. Depending on the home service agreement, a homeowner could be protected for as long as two years. What a Home Service Agreement Covers Home services agreements cover a broad range of home repairs, but can vary based on the insurer and the type of policy purchased. Most home service agreements are arranged as a specific list of repairs
