Transjugular intrahepatic portosystemic shunt (TIPS) is a well-established treatment for portal hypertension. Although most TIPS procedures are uncomplicated, iatrogenic complications such as gastric and duodenal ulceration can occur. We report a case of refractory gastric hemorrhage from portal hypertension after TIPS that responded to medical treatment with a conservative approach.T1-T2 flat squamous cell carcinoma of the anal canal. A case report. Primary carcinoma of the anal canal is a rare lesion. It usually consists of squamous cell carcinoma. Papillary lesions, glandular lesions and adenocarcinoma have also been reported. Only a few cases with both high and low grade squamous cell carcinoma have been observed. A high grade squamous cell carcinoma developed in a 61-year-old male with metastatic cervical lymph node at 6 months post-interferon therapy for chronic hepatitis C. The lesion was suspected to be in the anal canal from physical examination and MRI findings. Surgical resection was performed. There was microscopic lymph node metastasis. The resected specimen was histologically diagnosed as T1-T2/N0 squamous cell carcinoma of the anal canal. The patient is alive without recurrence 30 months after surgery.Katalin Szathmáry Katalin Szathmáry (born 10 December 1978) is a former Hungarian handball player.
